Spring Parade Home to Feature Mid-Century Modern Furnishings

Last year it was Restoration Hardware. This year, we find ourselves drawn to Room&Board, Allan Copley and Italian designer Antonio Calligaris for a clean line of home furnishings that has its roots in the past.

If you are unfamiliar with the Mid-Century Modern aesthetic, we invite you to read on! "Mid-Century Modern" refers to a design concept that generally became popular in the 1950s and is applied to architecture, interiors and furnishings. Architectural greats, such as Ludwig Mies van der Rohe and George Fred Keck, gave rise to the Mid-Century Modern style that is often considered industrial and experimental in form.

We like the crisp lines offered by the Mid-Century Modern movement and feel that the art, furniture and accessories featured look at home amid the clean architectural lines that define this year's Green Dream Home. But, not to worry, we haven't gone all modern. Every space has been softened with a warm color palette and surface texture - blurring the line between traditional and modern. Some might even call it a modern classic.

Want to learn more about the Mid-Century Modern style? Check out Wikipedia's page on Mid-Century Modern or for a more definitive text, pick up a copy of Judith Miller's Mid-Century Modern which traces the roots of this design break-through in architecture, finishes and furnishings. If you simply want to check out some of the latest Mid-Century Modern remakes, take a spin at the Room&Board or Antonio Calligaris website.

All furnishings featured at our 2013 Green Dream Home will be offered at a 10-50% discount during our post-parade sale. Sign up for our Design/Build Review newsletter to learn more about the sale. Updates will be emailed directly to newsletter recipients.

The Parade of Homes runs March 2 - March 24. Our Green Dream Home is property #41 on the tour.
